

Who Will Pay?
Germany? Perhaps Not
The Strasbourg Statute
Revenge Unprofitable
By Arthur Brisbane

The German indemnity is fixed. Some changes may come when Lloyd George, ruler of all Europe outside of Russia, discusses the matter with Germany's representatives. But subject to change of details, Germany is to pay the Allies, France chiefly, fifty thousand million dollars during the next forty-two years.

WHO WILL PAY THAT INDEMNITY? Will Germany pay it or will France pay it?

Fifty years ago France and Germany settled the war of 1870. Then Germany did what France does now. She took what she wanted. Alsace and Lorraine, that had formerly been German territory, and one thousand million dollars.

Blamark thought, and France thought, that France was to pay the bill. But France and Germany know now that it was only a question of waiting a few years.

Germany is to give back the one billion that Blamark took multiplied by fifty-five, and Germany is returning Alsace and Lorraine and a great strip of German territory, including most valuable mines. Blamark thought he was taking something from France. He was really piling up a debt to be repaid with 5,500 per cent interest a little later.

In the great Place de la Concorde stands a statue representing Strasbourg, the fine Cathedral City that Germany took from France fifty years ago.

After 1870 that statue was kept draped heavily in black. Every Frenchman saw it. In the war had seen or all his life had seen of that statue with the heavy black drapery. Every Frenchman as he went to school knew that the one idea of the French people was revenge.

The time came, and revenge came. Now Germany gives back Alsace and Lorraine. The Strasbourg statue is the Place de la Concorde in Berlin, in Germany, and the French, if they choose, can have around the neck of that statue a necklace of fifty-five billion, each representing a French dollar—fifty-five times the amount that Blamark took from France.

But who will pay the indemnity of 55,000 million dollars? The last time Germany has given back the land and money taken by Blamark, and all her colonies, her right to have an army, her independence, her colonies, her mines and fifty-five thousand millions, in payment of the one billion taken.

There the score stands now. How will it stand fifty years from now, after the sixty-five million Germans that raise big families shall have gone on breeding and brooding on revenge, developing a population three or four times as great as that of France? Will France then perhaps pay for her life with bloodshed is no longer strong enough to protect her, for the fifty-five billion?

And what will happen if Germany, unable to pay the amount, or unwilling to enter into industrial and financial slavery for twenty years, decides to throw herself into the arms of Russia?

What would happen to all Western Europe, France, Italy and England if the Russian population, Russian resources and German efficiency, Russian industry and fighting power should combine to make the Russian Empire a force in Europe and to enable Germany to push on toward the Atlantic and for all?

You may say that Germany has no army and navy. But it isn't guns or ships alone that count. What counts is THE FEELING OF A PEOPLE AND THE POWER OF INDIVIDUALS TO DIRECT.

MYER OF WOMAN BRAZENLY TELS HOW HE KILLED BROTHER OF Mrs. De Falco on Witness Stand

OF SIX TO ROB FLEET

Then a hundred armed men and women had secured the area near the Charneck home, armed with rifles and machine guns, all night.

Kacourian was looked up in the police station here. The police, fearing trouble to break up and steal the money which he knew was there.

MYER OF THE MONEY.

A week ago he had been a guest at the home and heard Charneck and his wife tell of their intended proposal to draw money from the bank to pay the mortgage interest.

The day after his visit, Charneck was held up while returning from work. He eluded the would-be robbers and ran away. His police declare Kacourian was the hold-up man.

The murder of Mrs. Charneck is described by Coroner Mix as the most brutal in the history of Connecticut. The body of the woman was found in the cellar of the home. She had been killed by repeated blows with a stone or other blunt instrument on her head and body and eventually had been dragged into the basement from the kitchen of her home, which showed the signs of the life and death struggle which ensued before the woman was killed.

Every room in the house was literally turned upside down. Every drawer had been ransacked by the murderer, evidently in his search for the money. Furniture was broken and blood spattered over the walls and floor.

When the shoe store was lying on the kitchen floor, it had evidently been thrown there by the murderer. The body of the woman was found in the cellar of the home. She had been killed by repeated blows with a stone or other blunt instrument on her head and body and eventually had been dragged into the basement from the kitchen of her home, which showed the signs of the life and death struggle which ensued before the woman was killed.

The document reads the unrelenting of a man who had been arrested as a suspect, supplied the connection between the small piece of paper and the murder.

When the small piece of paper had been picked up in the woods, he denied he knew the identity of the woman. He said that the printing was not that of the woman who had been arrested, but that of a woman who had been arrested as a suspect, supplied the connection between the small piece of paper and the murder.

First published photograph of Mrs. Angelina De Falco, who is charged with soliciting legal business without being a lawyer.

Police Chief Shine of Dedham testified to her good character and reputation. District Attorney Katzman stated he saw her for the first time at her present trial, held before Judge Murray in Municipal Court.

He told of a number and then showed the negro girl identified it as a printing from a second. He said worked in a photograph factory in Bridgeport and readily recognized the small, dingy, thin woman who had been arrested as a suspect, supplied the connection between the small piece of paper and the murder.

WHERE U BOY THE HAT.

Now We Are Holding Our After-Inventory Sale!

The chances are that if this sale lots will be sold out before mail orders could be received, but we will do the best we can on any orders sent in with this understanding.

In every department we are closing out hundreds of lots—without much regard or concern for what these goods cost—or previously sold for. The main idea is to reduce stocks that are broken, close out remnants and odd pieces. So price is the last thing to consider.

OUR ANNUAL STOCK-TAKING WAS JAN. 31

You can pick up wonderful bargains if you can find what you want. As this is a clearance, all sales, of course, are final.
